^①Due to global warming, the blooming season comes earlier than in the past.

^②According to scientists, flowers that used to bloom in April now appear in March. ^③That is about 30 days earlier than in the 1980s. ^④However, this early blooming causes problems.

^⑤Pollinating insects such as bees and butterflies still wake up from their winter sleep in April. ^⑥This is because insects are not as sensitive to climate change as plants. ^⑦This mismatch in timing harms both plants and insects. ^⑧When bees and butterflies wake up, they cannot find food because many flowers are already gone. ^⑨Plants cannot bear fruit without the insects moving pollen from flower to flower. ^⑩This affects humans too. ^⑪About

75% of crop species need insects to help them make fruits. ^⑫Scientists warn that if this continues, we might not have enough food in the future.
